

AutPlay® Therapy Certification Program

AutPlay® Therapy is a specialized play therapy approach for working with autistic children, neurodivergent children and adolescents, and children with developmental disabilities. AutPlay® was created by Dr. Robert Jason Grant to address the unique needs of neurodivergent children and adolescents who enter into a therapeutic process with a licensed mental health practitioner.

AutPlay® is an integrative family play therapy approach with theoretical underpinnings in humanistic, family systems, developmental, and cognitive behavioral theories. Various play therapy theories, relational methods, and cognitive-behavioral strategies are integrated into protocol, all of which incorporate evidence-based practices and empirical support for working with autistic children. More specific content and protocol of AutPlay® Therapy can be reviewed on the AutPlay® Therapy website – www.autplaytherapy.com. A current list of providers who have completed the AutPlay Therapy Certification Training is maintained and displayed on the AutPlay® website as well.

Completion of the AutPlay® Therapy Certification Training signifies that the practitioner has met the requirements to be a Certified AutPlay® Therapy Provider. Certification in AutPlay® Therapy requires the practitioner to complete the AutPlay® Therapy Certification Training (16 CE Hrs). Practitioners are also required to read the AutPlay® Therapy book, complete the training Understanding Ableism and Neurodiversity in Play Therapy, and complete a post training exam. AutPlay® Certification Training includes symptomology, special considerations, diagnosis of autism, an overview of neurodevelopmental disorders, an intensive examination of the AutPlay® protocol including the phases of treatment, assessment strategies, target therapy areas, parent involvement and training, and limit setting procedures. The certification training further presents the AutPlay® Follow Me Approach (FMA) which is designed for children who lack engagement and connection ability. Participants engage in experiential activities, role play practice, case conceptualization, and therapy planning as they complete their certification.

Development of the AutPlay® Therapy Certification Training

AutPlay® Therapy began as an effort to provide an effective evidence-based protocol for mental health professionals working with autistic children and their families. A special focus involved providing a play therapy approach, which could be implemented in a community mental health clinic, to address the mental health needs of neurodivergent children.

At the time of the inception of AutPlay®, most established autism focused therapies were not mental health based nor designed for mental health professionals. As AutPlay® formed, it became apparent that mental health professionals working with the autistic population would benefit from a formal certification program, not only to ensure a thorough understating of autism, but to provide validation as a professional with advanced training in autism.

Before the AutPlay® Therapy Certification Training was official and ready to be offered to participants, the Association for Play Therapy (APT) was contacted to review the AutPlay® Therapy Certification materials and verify the training met the standards for receiving play therapy continuing education hours. APT is the governing body in the United States for the Registered Play Therapist and Registered Play Therapist Supervisor credentials. APT approved the content and process of the AutPlay® Therapy Certification Training for continuing education hours. www.a4pt.org

The International Board for Credentialing and Continuing Education Standards (IBCCES) was also contacted to review AutPlay® Therapy Certification training materials to be approved for IBCCES continuing education hours. IBCCES is an international organization that governs autism related credentialing. IBCCES reviewed the AutPlay® training materials and process and approved the AutPlay® certification training as meeting the standard of IBCCES for continuing education hours related to autism. www.Ibcces.org

AutPlay® Therapy protocol has also been reviewed and approved by the National Board for Certified Counselors (NBCC) as a recognized training applicable for mental health counselors and available for continuing education hours.

Robert Jason Grant Ed.D LLC, the parent company of AutPlay® Therapy is an approved APT continuing education provider, approved training partner with IBCCES, and an approved continuing education provider for the National Board for Certified Counselors (NBCC).

AutPlay® Therapy Certification provides an extra layer of accountability, reference, and professional identity that has been lacking in the mental health community regarding working with autistic and other neurodivergent children and their families. Beyond a competency expectation, certification is also designed to provide a level of confidence for the mental health professional and the ability to reference a specialize training experience. AutPlay® Therapy continues to grow and update as more evidence-based practices emerge and advances in autism understanding increase.
